

PREFACE

In the course of bringing this project to completion I have been immeasurably aided by more organisations and individuals than I can properly thank. A Senior Faculty Fellowship from Dartmouth College and a fellowship from Clare Hall at Cambridge University made it possible to write much of the text of this book.

Numerous people, most notably Paul Cartledge, read earlier drafts and made suggestions that contributed markedly to the final product, and Aurora McClain did an exemplary job editing the text. Along the way I have received advice on specific points and assistance from Rachel Bernard, Suzanne Detol, Stephen Hodgkinson, David Lewis, Ellen Millender, Nicola Nenci, Nigel Nicholson, James Roy, and Gina Salapata, among others. A great deal of valuable feedback came from the opportunity to present some of the arguments made in this book at the Centre for Spartan and Peloponnesian Studies at the University of Nottingham.

The debt I owe to my family in general and my parents in particular defies simple expression but is no doubt well known to readers from their own experience. Finally, special thanks are due to my wife Cecilia and my sons Michael and Danny, for their unswerving patience, support, and good humour.
